CLASSIFICATION OF DEFICIENCIES

CRITICAL: Activities or processes that may result in an immediate or latent risk to consumer health. Applies to any deficiency that can directly affect product quality. Includes activities involving fraud, product falsification , or data falsification.

MAJOR: Activities or processes that, though not classified as critical, may lead to a product that does not comply with its marketing authorization or that indicate a failure in batch release procedures.

OTHERS: Deficiencies that are neither critical nor major but still deviate from Good Manufacturing Practices.

A combination of mayor deficiencies may result in a critical deficiency if they involve serious failures in the quality or manufacturing system.

A combination of others deficiencies which individually would not be classified as mayor ,may collectively result in a mayor deficiency.

CLASSIFICATION OF INSPECTIONS

PO-16012-001 Inspection Procedure

Certification inspections of Good Manufacturing Practices

Licensing inspections: initial licensing, renewal, expansion

Concise inspections: focused on specific areas or processes

Follow-up inspections: closure of observations

Complaint-based inspections

Investigative inspections: suspected deviation from regulatory compliance or health risk
